GERMAN "PEACE OFFER" SCORNED AS CAMOUFLAGE

AMERICAN TROOPS CROSS THE AIRE

Continue to Push Forward Up the Slopes of the Hill--Rheims Safe From Bombardment--British Eight Miles From Douai--Germans Burning Villages.

With the American Army Northwest of Verdun, Oct. 7 (Noon).—American troops forced their way across to the west bank of the Aire river today and occupied a village which the Germans had evacuated in the face of the fire of the Americans.

After occupying the village the Americans, this morning, continued to push forward, mounting the slopes of the hill along the bank of the Aire river.

By breaking German resistance over a 30-mile front north of Rheims and in Champagne General Gouraud's French and American army may compel the Germans to fall back to the Aisne river along the line of Berry-au-Bac, Rethal and Vouzieres.

This would mean a retirement, at some points, of 20 miles from the old German front east of Rheims.

Immediately northeast of Rheims the Germans have been thrown back seven miles since the beginning of the present French drive in that area, while farther east the Franco-Americans have forced a crossing of the Suippe river, adding to the menace of General von Mudra's Germany army.

The American and French advance continues in the Champagne district and air observers report that the Germans are burning many villages and are moving back supplies

General von Mudra's army was nearly trapped by the swift advance of the French and Americans. It fell back with rapidity that bordered on an actual rout and now fighting is in progress on ground that has been free of combats since 1914

Rheims is now safe from further German bombardment

The British have temporarily shifted their main pressure from the Cambrai-St Quentin front to the Douai-Cambrai front and new gains were made there during the night The British are now less than eight miles from the important German base at Douai

However, the chief interest today centered on the Champagne and Argonne fronts where heavy forces of Americans are engaged.

The Americans that attacked up the Somme-Py-Attigny railroad, gaining over four miles in their first dash and more than two additional miles in the second phase of their drive contributed materially to the great victory on the Champagne front. The French and Americans have been carrying out a converging movement, the former driving towards the northeast and the latter towards the northwest.

Fighting is now in progress along the Suippe river, but it is not believed the Germans will be able to make a decisive stand there owing to the exposure of their flanks to the Americans and French in the Aire river sector, north of the Suippes.

Bazoncourt and Boult-sur-Seippe, situated on the river, are both in French hands.

The Germans are counter attacking viciously but without success.

FRENCH EXTEND ON ST. QUENTIN CANAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Oct. 7 (1:05 p. m.).—French troops fighting north of St. Quentin have captured Morcourt, according to information received from the front this afternoon.

This capture extends the decisive hold of the French on the eastern bank of the St. Quentin canal.

(Morcourt is just south of Tilloy farm, where there was hard fighting all day Sunday.)

TNT EXPLOSION DEAD NUMBER 94

Property Loss Estimated at $25,000,000—Only Four of Thirteen Loading Units Remain Standing—Many of Dead Unidentified.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 7.—Search for the bodies of victims was resumed today at the plant of the T. A. Gillespie Loading Company at Morgan, N. J., simultaneously with the beginning of preliminary work of reconstructing the plant. A steady downpour of rain and the exhaustion of explosives enabled both undertakings to proceed without danger.

The dead are estimated at ninety-four and the seriously injured at fifty by Dr. John W. Trask, medical director of the United States Employes' Compensation Commission. The property loss is expected to exceed $25,000,000.

It is probable that many of the dead will never be identified and that a full list of the casualties will never be compiled owing to the destruction of many of the company's records.

The unidentified bodies will be buried in one plot after relatives had every opportunity to make identification.

Only twenty-four bodies had been taken from the ruins when the searchers began work today, but other bodies were visible.

Of the thirteen big loading units that stood in the vast yard of the plant, four only were standing today, and they showed the effects of the fire and shock of shell explosions.

Government and plant officials dismissed as "nonsense" again today, reports that the catastrophe was the result of enemy activities. It was learned, however, that secret service and Department of Justice men are making investigations.

VAN OOSTENBRUGGE REPORTED KILLED

Report Probably an Error, Though Official, as His Letter was Dated Subsequent to Date of Reported Death.

In the handling of large casualty lists by the war department errors are sure to occur despite the utmost precaution. It is probable than an error was made in the telegram referred to in the following letter:

Editor of Kingston Freeman:

Dear Sir:—The letter of our son, Horace, in your issue of Saturday, was dated September 12. It was not all written on the same day, but the date of the Paris postmark was September 15. We are certain that he wrote it himself. On Friday night about midnight we received a telegram from Washington that Horace was killed in action on September 6. We know that cannot be true. Either the date or the wording of the message is wrong. We think it ought to have been "wounded in action," for as near as we can make out he was wounded on the 6th of September. Nor do we think that he could have been back on the firing line before the end of the month, but that, of course, we do not know. His brother, John, of New York, telegraphed to Washington and cabled to Paris for information. In very great anxiety we are waiting for a reply.

Yours between hope and fear.
REV. AND MRS. VAN. OOSTENBRUGGE.

LIBERTY LOAN BLANKS ARE HERE

A shortage of blank applications for Liberty Loan subscriptions this morning caused some of the workers to temporarily suspend the house to house canvass. There are now plenty of blanks on hand and ward captains and workers may procure them at the Y. M. C. A. They are urged to do so at once.

Real Estate at Auction.

Sheriff Smith sold at auction at the court house this morning under an execution the interest of the Skytop Ranch in about ninety acres of land in the town of Ulster, near the Cold Spring House. It was struck off to Newton W. Fessenden for $425.

"HOCH DER KAISER!"

That is what you say in effect when you fail to do your utmost for the Fourth Liberty Loan.

THIS LOAN IS THE TEST of America's sincerity, patriotism and intention to win the war. If we fall short of the Government's needs for he will be justified in thinking we are only Dollar Chasers, Dollar Spenders, but not Dollar Savers or Patriots.

THE KAISER WILL REJOICE,

HE'S WATCHING US.

Will we please or disappoint him? It's up to you to end the war quickly by proving your earnestness, or to prolong it by making the loan a failure and thus give the Kaiser new courage.

WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

DAMAGE DONE BY HIGH WIND STORM

Sunday was a very unpleasant day when it rained, and was very pleasant when the sun shone and the entire day alternated on both propositions, for first there would be a little rain and then a little sunshine. Fortunately the temperature was moderate. It began to grow colder, however, after 8 o'clock in the evening when a chill wind blew up, increased to a gale, and continued blowing all night and early this morning.

The Kingston Gas & Electric Company were unable to supply electric current regularly to their customers during the morning, and at The Freeman office the presses and other machinery were unable to turn until 9:15 due to lack of electric power, and the current was subject to frequent interruptions thereafter.

Inquiry at the power station brought forth the fact that they had found no wires down, and were receiving current regularly from the Henk Falls line, but that the trouble was in Kingston where the wind blew the primary lines together.

The telephone company reported that they were fortunate as nothing out of the ordinary in the trouble line was reported.

Thousands of dollars worth of the scanty crop of very valuable apples were blown from the trees in the orchards and ruined for high grade trade. There is a great opportunity for consumers to purchase those bruised apples promptly and preserve them in jelly, apple sauce, etc., or by drying.

Killian's Death Listed.

In the casualty list released today by the war department is noted the name of Private Harry A. Killian of No. 154 Spring street, as killed in action on September 23. His father received word to that effect from the war department, as noted in The Freeman at the time.

GRIP CLOSES CITY SCHOOLS; MANY ILL

Fifteen Teachers Ill With Disease—1,025 School Children Absent from School—French Lectures Called Off—Garden Show Will be Given.

With fifteen teachers in the city's schools ill with the grip, and 1,035 children not reporting for school this morning, the board of education decided to close the schools in the city at noon today, and the schools will remain closed for one week at least.

Superintendent Michael stated this morning that he did not believe all of the school children absent were ill with the grip, but there was no question but many of them were. Parents have become alarmed over the grip in the city, he said, and for that reason have kept their children home.

During the week there has been scheduled a number of illustrated lectures in the various grammar schools by Colonel French. These have been postponed indefinitely.

Garden Show On.

The garden show and exhibit will not be postponed but will be given as planned in the high school gym. Superintendent Michael said the windows of the gym would be kept open and he did not believe there would be any danger, as there would be plenty of ventilation at all times.

P.-T. Convention Postponed.

Mrs. W. R. Anderson, president of the Federated Council of the Parent-Teachers Association, received a telegram Sunday morning from Gloversville, saying that owing to the epidemic the board of health has ordered the State Convention to which Mrs. Anderson was a delegate, postponed. The convention was to be held Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week.

Kaiser's Own Words Show He is Not Sincere, but Only Seeking to Obtain Advantage --- Offer Timed to Harm Fourth Liberty Loan.

Washington, Oct. 7.—The German and Austrian peace appeals are officially before the United States government. The German appeal, addressed specifically to President Wilson, was delivered to him in the White House at eleven o'clock by Frederick Oederlin, the acting Swiss Swiss charge d'affaires. Half an hour earlier the Austro-Hungarian appeal had been handed to Secretary of State Lansing by the Swedish minister.

It was officially announced that President Wilson would lose no time in making reply to the two notes.

Officials made it plain that the reply of the President would be the same to both notes. It was necessary that these documents be compared with the unofficial text which has been before the President and Secretary of State Lansing before any reply could be completed. For this reason it was impossible for the President to dispose of the communications as expeditiously as he did the Austrian appeal for a non-binding unofficial peace conference. However, the President had the rough text of his reply ready when the Swiss charge presented the note. It will take only a comparatively short time to smooth it into shape, officials said.

Secretary Lansing was a luncheon guest at the White House where he presented Sir Eeric Geddes, First Lord of the British Admiralty, and his party, to the President and Mrs. Wilson.

The latest peace overtures of the Central Powers will be rejected. Official and unofficial Washington were fully convinced of this today They found the reason for their belief in this fact in the kaiser's own proclamation to his armed forces telling them that he was "esolved once more to offer peace" to the enemy. Right at the outset the German ruler emphasized that he would ask "only an honorable peace." In other words, officials explained, a German-made peace And that is something which the United States has insisted and continues to insist it never will consent to.

This war cannot be ended by barter or compromise, officials say. Neither can a peace conference be permitted while Germany holds the fruits of victory. Her armies are in force on devastated Russia; they hold robbed Rumania. They retain their death grip on northern France, Belgium and Luxemburg. And while the new imperial chancellor, Prince Max of Baden, tells the reichstag that he has accepted on behalf of Gemany the peace principles outlined by President Wilson "as a basis for negotiations" only, the kaiser himself rattles the sword, praises the army and declares the fighting will go on until peace on his terms is reached.

President Wilson is assumed to have reached a decision on what the reply of the United States will be. There will, of course, be a formal reply to the formal offer But no one excepting the president himself is in position to know what that reply will be. Officials generally believe that the president will take occasion to make it plain just how the Central Powers can get peace. It is entirely possible that he will point to the convocation that eliminated Bulgaria from the war as a model. Then again he may simply repeat his original declaration that a peace cannot be considered until the principles of restoration and restitution has been accepted by the enemy.

From the purely military standpoint acceptance of the proposals at the present time without guarantees for the future would be of the greatest benefit to the enemy. At every point on the western front the Germans are retreating before the victorious American-British-French and Belgian army. They are sorely pressed everywhere. Their reserves are exhausted and their supplies very short. At home the German people are panic striken, for the first time realizing at last that there is a real possibility that their vaunted military machine cannot prevent an invasion of German soil. In the immediate future, if the fighting continues, the Germans must retreat on a wide scale surrendering miles upon miles of captured territory which if they are allowed to retain it by armistice would give them unwarranted material for bargain purposes. And while envoys were discussing possible peace terms the German high command would be able to refill the army, get another supply of munitions, etc., and be ready to go on with the fighting if it was found that the Allies did not want a made in Germany peace.

While no official presumed to speak for the president, the men closest to him made it very plain that he does not believe that Germany is sincere in her desire for peace. The latest move, officials said, plainly was forced because of the capitulation of Bulgaria, the impending surrender of Turkey and the great unrest in Austria which resulted in the Socialist members of the chamber of deputies bitterly denouncing Germany.

President Wilson, members of his official family declared, could be depended on to prevent insidious German plots undermining the morale of the American people. Incidentally, it was pointed out that this peace move has been launched at a time when it might have the effect of slackening up the Liberty Loan. The president will act to prevent this, it was explained.

The Austrian note reached the Swedish minister who represents the Austrian interests here, last night. Mr. Ekengren at once made arrangement to present it officially through the state department. The German note came to the Swiss charge, Frederick Oederlin, last night Switzerland represents German interests here. The charge at once got into communication with the state department and arranged to present it some time during the morning.

The complete text of the communication has been before the president in unofficial form since yesterday it is understood, and his reply will be sent forward soon after the official text has been received and compared.

GERMAN PASTOR URGES LIBERTY LOAN

German Born and German Descended Exhorted to Come to the Support of Their Country With Their Dollars.

The Rev. A. Schmidtkonz, pastor of the Spring Street German Lutheran Church, started to co-operate in the campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan. At the close of the morning and evening services Sunday he explained not only the objects of the loan but also emphasized in well chosen words the duty of everyone to do his share to secure the success of the loan. He referred to the fact that according to a report by the U. S. treasury, America's foreign-born population—immigrants within the last generation—poured out their savings for Liberty bonds of the third loan more generously, in consideration of their limited financial ability, than native citizens. This is indicated by a treasury report estimating subscriptions of citizens of 35 foreign nationalities at $741,437,000, or nearly 18 per cent of the $4,176,000,000 total of the third loan. The Germans made the biggest record of all nationalities, their subscriptions amounted to $87,295,000. This fact speaks of their enthusiastic patriotism more than a dozen languages. This very liberal support of the Liberty loans by the Americans of German descent and birth are positive proofs of the good influences exerted by the German language papers and the German language churches. That the German language is needed and most useful for support of the government and that hundreds and thousands of people in America can only be reached and taught by papers printed in their mother tongue is attested by the fact that the bureau of information has had translated more than one of its pamphlets into German, to make them more accessible just to those people. The German language papers and the German language churches will, as heretofore, set to work their powerful influence to help to insure the success of the Fourth Liberty Loan. The country counts upon our help. Let us respond to the call. Let every language, every society, every church be put into the service of the country

Pastor Schmidtkonz declared to his people and he wishes to announce it through The Freeman, that he is willing and ready to assist anyone in securing Liberty bonds and that he would be glad to receive many subscriptions at his office. As a result of his announcement he received a number of subscriptions already.

"BIGELOW DAY" OBSERVED AT MALDEN

Annual Patriotic Gathering at Bigelow Homestead on Saturday Shows New Spirit of Militant Patriotism and Determination.

Even at Malden-on-the-Hudson, and at the historic home of the Bigelow family, where "Annual Patriotics" have been in order for several years, a new note of patriotism was struck on Saturday afternoon; a note sounding our dawning realization, not that we are getting into the war, but that we are in the war, and into stay to the victorious end! These annual gatherings, where Mr. and Mrs. Poultney Bigelow have been the gracious host and hostess, have always born the stamp of democracy, but never before have the people of the land in and about Malden, the home people and the people of many lands, or who have been privileged to visit many lands; the people who came afoot and the people who came in the costliest of touring motors, come actually together in such a spirit as was shown Saturday. And the emblem of this fraternity was the service pin or tiny flag or ring! When "our boys" are fighting in the trenches together, what matters all else!

Yet even democracy counts it no denial of its principles to openly recognize and regard men and women who "have made good," and among the many notable personages one encountered at the luncheon which preceded the speeches, Judge Seymour Van Santvoort, chairman of the Public Service Committee; Waldo Smith, of aqueduct fame; Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of the Navy League, and party, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hopkins, of Catskill; Lady Eaton, of Toronto and party; Robert Ingersoll, of the Ingersoll watch fame and Mrs. Ingersoll, Mr. and Mrs Parker, of Woodstock; Everett Shinn, the artist, and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John Carlson, of Woodstock summer colony; Miss Grace Bigelow, of Highland Falls; Melville Clarke, of Schenectady, harpist, of musical fame, and manufacturer of the small harp which is creating such a musical sensation, Miss Helen Waldo, mezzo-soprano of Metropolitan Opera House fame; Mr and Mrs Herman Livingston; Mrs. C. C. Stillman, of Cornwall; Major George A. Putnam, publisher; Rear Admiral Francis J. Higginson and Mrs. Higginson. Major George Seamon, who so interested the large audience at our high school about a year ago; in addition to our nearby celebrities.

Old Glory and the flags of the Allies fluttered in the autumn breezes that tossed up the white caps on the waters of the lordly Hudson as it flows past the very threshould of the house of Bigelow. The gathering of neighbors and guests seated on the grounds in front of the house and on the porches, wearing many tinted gowns and hats, for there was a sprinkling of the khaki and the navy blue of the Navy amongst the men, presented a picture that vied in blended coloring with the autumnal foliage nearby and on the opposite side of the river.

At the appointed time, the host, Poultney Bigelow, author, historian, and lecturer, assembled his guests to welcome the school children, who came marching proudly from the school, bearing the Stars and Stripes, and headed by a six or seven year old Jean de Arc, on her noble steed. Beside the flag, the children carried posters, flag decked, of Lincoln, Pershing and President Wilson. They were grouped together and sang patriotic songs, one a salute to our flag, which called forth much applause, and after which Mr. Bigelow told them to "smell their way to the ice cream," and, with a twinkle in his eye, warned them not to make too much noise, as the grown ups were going to make speeches and were queer enough to want to be heard.

Following the invocation, pronounced by the Rev. Thoams Cole of Saugerties, and the Lord's Prayer in which all joined, Mr. Bigelow said that the people had gathered together at Malden, some coming from afar, to listen to three eminent thinkers. And as the derided prophets who forecast, four years ago, our entrance into the world war had come into their own, so, possibly the vision of the speakers might on this occasion forecast future historic events in which we must all take part. Mr. Bigelow in his own graphic language showed the unspeakable moral stimulus upon the war, which our entrance into it was creating, and the complete gratitude of both France and England. He said that he had received a recent letter from Rudyard Kipling, whom England herself had counted a wide war maker because of his warnings, in which the poet told of walking about on his farm—not as beautiful as the Bigelow farm, but quite like it—and finding two American soldiers strolling about, and of the joy and happiness he felt at their coming over, saying, "So now I am happier than I was, over the moral comfort of their coming, which is beyond all words." Mr. Bigelow expressed his regret that Metz had not been taken by the Allies before the present time, and told vividly of being in Metz some twenty years ago, a town wherein the people spoke and were French exclusively, on an occasion when the Kaiser visited the town. Addressing the people in his customary harsh manner, and speaking entirely in German, he said to them, "German you are; German you always have been; German you always will be; So help me God, and my own good sword!" The remarks were greeted with silence, but later in moving about amongst the people at a good safe distance from the Kaiser's hearing, Mr. Bigelow heard many murmur, "We'll see about that!"

The host added much to the genial spirit of the afternoon by the way in which he introduced the various speakers, in his inimitable manner, through personal anecdote or bit of his kindly or caustic humor, creating a cordial sympathy between speaker and audience. Nor were addresses all there was of the afternoon, for the program was delightfully interspersed with music by artists who had learned one of an artist's hardest lessons, the dignity and affectiveness of simplicity. After the entire audience had sung America, Mr. Bigelow told how, during the first days of the war, long before we had entered into it, and when Canada had sprung instantly to arms, one Sir John Eaton of Canada had told all of his host of employes that they might enlist in the battle for democracy and liberty, and their families would be cared for and their pay go on as before. And from the house of Eaton, in Toronto, had come to Malden that day, Lady Eaton, the wife of Sir John Eaton, who would sing for them all, and would be accompanied by our great American harpist from Syracuse, Melville Clark. Lady Eaton, whose very presence was inspiring, said she would sing, "Oh! Canada!" and if any present had been led to doubt the loyalty of the people of Quebec, they might have an opportunity to judge for themselves, as both the words and music were by French Canadians. No one doubted. As an encore she sang, and her fine soprano voice charmed all, "Keep the Home Fires Burning," the assemblage joining in the chorus.

Later in the afternoon, Lady Eaton sang other solos which were indeed enjoyed and deeply appreciated for their sentiment and artistic merit, by all present.

The other soloist who charmed her hearers again and again, was Miss Helen Waldo, who has been heard and enjoyed at the Metropolitan Opera House and whose rich mezzo soprano voice and gracious sincerity of manner made her singing of Scotch and rish ballads, etc, specially delightful.

No wonder that Melville Clark, harpist, who has been playing for our men in camps, in company with Miss Wilson, (the President's daughter), has with his small Irish harp fascinated his audience. Nothing was said as to Mr. Clark's ancestry but judging from his keen appreciation of the virility, the brightness as well as the tenderness of the Irish music as shown in the little Irish harp with the big tone—his own invention—and in his playing of both that and the larger concert instrument, one had suspicions. At all events his music was full of life and spirit, quite refreshing after the too frequent lackadaisical sentimentality of harp music as so often heard. And he was so generous in responding to the "Oliver Twist" appetite of his audience for "more!"

But the gathering was not a musical but a patriotic meeting, made the more patriotic because of the music.

The first speaker was Judge Seymour Van Santvoort, the author of "The House of Caesar," and a speaker who at once made friends with his audience There was no doubt as to that friendship, judging from the applause which greeted the judge's statement that he had six boys wearing the uniform of the United States Army or Navy; all volunteers who enlisted; all college men.. The seventh hoped in another fortnight to enter the service of his country. It was the voice of a seven-times father which pled for the support, to the limit of this present Liberty Loan, wherein we who cannot fight can do our part to support our boys who fight for us. But the judge fully realized that this loan was not all of the giving necessary. With those boys, the beloved of our souls, in deadly combat, we must give unreserved service and sacrifice. The speaker considered it glorious that this country was following the path of conscience in coming to the rescue of wounded Liberty, and prayed that we might live to see the day when in the mercy of Providence, democracy should be the handmaid of Liberty, and Liberty the last word of God.

The next speaker was Colonel Thompson, founder of the United States Navy League and also of the New York Athletic Club, which the host said he should prefer to call "Colonel Thompson's Athletic Club." which had set up new world standards. Colonel Thompson's chief message to the people was that of one of our boys at the front. This particular "boy," was a young man in the Navy during the Spanish-American war. The breaking out of this war found him the head of a family with children of his own, whose interest in daddy's Spanish-American war stories somewhat waned in their curiosity as to what daddy was going to do in this war. With our entrance into the fight he sailed for France, taking up ambulance work, and there he has been ever since. He was a typical club man, used to all the niceties of modern prosperous living which made his message all the more forceful. It was in the shape of a poem, probably entitled "Buck Up!" and of such exceptional character, that the Freeman hopes to be able to present it in its entirety to its readers in the very near future. During the Revolution and the Civil War, many of our greatest poets and writers rose like great mountain peaks. Today our war literature of force, beauty and power, comes from the men at the front who in a literary sense seem to be more like majestic mountain ranges. Colonel Thompson closed with the query as to what is to come after we have attained a complete and satisfactory peace? He believed it impossible for the Anglo-Saxon to ever be capable of such acts as those of the Hun, with the Anglo-Saxon inborn respect for law. But underneath all law lies the fact that punishment must follow a breaking of the law, and if punishment fails to follow the breaking of the law, then there is no law. But as a result of civilized action, Colonel Thompson stood for a judicial decision as to the punishment, which in its influence must be full, ample, and commensurate with the crimes committed.

In the person of the last speaker, one saw American history since the Civil War, as it has been made and is being made and the living [illegible] and made vital [illegible] the dead forms of history. [illegible] governmental restriction as to news paper [illegible] the high lights of this informing address may here be given, which is a loss to those who did not hear Major George Haven Putnam speak. Mr. Bigelow said that he would refrain from introducing him as the greatest of American publishers, preferring to introduce him as a hero of the Civil War, who had survived Libby prison, and stood, hale and hearty and youthful before them. Major Putnam has but recently returned from a mission to England, not dissimiular to the mission which Henry Ward Beecher undertook for the American people in tht days of the Civil War.

Major Putnam expressed his satisfaction in addressing his audience as "Fellow Americans," rather than "My Lords and Ladies," as he had been doing while in England, part of the time under orders from the king to address audiences wherever sent by the king and the British government. Major Putnam did not hesitate to express his own views and the evident feelings of our English cousins over the fact that we wasted two years in getting ready to do our part in the war. However we are at last in the war with Great Britain, and a good part of the major's address had to do with the telling of the changed attitude of the English people to America their cordialty and their respectful regard. England Canada had been exceeding patient, but exceeding anxious as to our delayed action and out ultimate purpose, which is now no longer doubted. And not only toward us, but in and of herself has England changed. The major, who said that after visiting England yearly for half a century, said he. knew his England well, found a new strength of character and depth of sympathy everywhere. England was beginning to get a vision through service and sacrifice of this whole great world issue which was considered well, since. "Where no vision is, the people perish." And we too, made up of many peoples, a great part of whom had come to our shores to "get' rather than to "give;" must also get the vision if we are to stand shoulder to shoulder in our colaboring with England.

Major Putnam graphically described one of the most remarkable gatherings in all history, that held in Central Hall, Westminster Abbey, last of Fourth of July, the 142nd anniversary of our Independence, when the occasion was celebrated by some 3,500 of the best people of London, Oxford, Cambridge and Major Putman was priveleged to address that assemblage as a representative of the American people

Again the speaker noted the many real privations suffered by all home staying English people, without one word of complaint, without one grumble, but with a cheery confidence that the terrible losses suffered would not be in vain

Major Putnam enthused his audience with the thought of what a glorious thing it will be if America shall have entered this great world war to become the decisive factor in winning the victory that shall make for permanent peace. And he felt sure that that would be our privilege, even as England felt it would be, for today England realizes and recognizes the fact that it was well that she did not break up the Republic, celebrating its 142nd year of independence.

Having disregarded all international law, we should after a victorious peace has been won, demand of Germany that she shall be put under bonds for years to come to make good so far as may be, the terrible wrongs she has committed, so that we can be assured that there shall prevail hereafter government of the people, by the people and for the people.

At the close of Major Putnam's thought-inspiring address, Major Seamon, arose and asked for a rising vote of thanks from the assemblage to the host and hostess of the afternoon, whose hospitality had been so richly enjoyed, and to those who by address or music had inspired them all, and it was spontaneously given. The benediction pronounced by the Rev. C. E. Metzger of Malden, brought the afternoon's program to a close, and soon after, the guests bade farewell to their genial host and gracious hostess.

Among these present from Kingston were—Mayor Palmer, Canfield, Jr, Judge and Mrs. A. T. Clearwater and Miss Ella Van Deusen, Mr. Hungerford and son of the Eagle Hotel; Mr. and Mrs. F. E. W. Darrow; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Francis J. Higginson, Judge James A. Betts, George and David Burgevin, Mrs. Charles A. Preston, Mrs. C. Gordon Riel, Mr. and Mrs. Lovatt and Mrs. Jansen Preston; Mrs. James S. Fuller, Mrs. Everett Fowler, Mrs. J. M. Fowler, John E. Kraft, Thomas A. Comerford, Floyd Edinger, Mr. Loyd, Principal Albert A. Brooks of School No. 2, Mrs. Brooks and Master Ralph Brooks, Mrs. Charles A. Coles, Mrs. Harry G. Smith and Mrs. C. N. Reed.

Had the afternoon's lessons in war time patriotism needed any emphasizing, they must have found that emphasis, in the spectacle which greeted many who returned by auto from Malden, as they met the two hearses and two funeral corteges of the Saugerties men, Leonard McCormack, an enlisted man who died Sunday at Camp Devens, and Floyd Spring of Camp Jackson, Columbus, both of whom died of pneumonia following an attack of Spanish influenza. A detachment of the Home Guard accompanied the funeral cortege.

Soldier's Religion.

The soldier regards God as the intelligence that marshals the moral forces of all time, but as an intelligence, like his general's, to be trusted rather than understood; and he regards a blind and unquestioned obedience to this direction as the individual's only possible contribution to the ultimate victory. His religion is therefore, first, absolute trust, and then, absolute submission. The immediacy of the fighter's need makes it easier for him to attain these two conditions than for us, whose incorporation of creed in conduct is not so insistent a constraint; but the religion of the front and at home has the same frankly intuitive character.—Winifred Kirkland in Atlantic.

Source of Amber and Jade.

It is at the source of the Chindwin, or western branch of the Irrawaddy, that the famous amber and jade mines are which have supplied China with these much-prized stones for centuries.

Effigies Thought to Bring Luck.

The scarab of the land of the Pyramids is the expression of the hope of resurrection and the desire to live long. As the beetle was supposed to be always born anew, so the carrying of the beetle or its image came into the customs of the ancients. The warriors of an elder day hung the images of gods about their necks, and many of the brooches and pins of the old fighters were the effigies of luck-bringing divinities.

Therefore, Be Cheerful!

Depression, gloom, dark brooding these are the worn stones in the descent to the inferno of incompetence, helplessness, delayed victory, or even ultimate defeat. This, we know, is true evermore in our individual life struggles. It is just as true of nations.—William Allen Knight.

VICTORY IN BONDS.

Reports from several centers indicate that the continuing victorious march of the Allies tends to slacken the movement of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. Imagining that the end of the war is near, many people, relaxed and feeling at ease, seem to think that the success of the present loan is unimportant. There is probably less of this folly than has been reported, but what little there is calls for plain speech. In the first place, the enormous bills already due must be paid even if complete victory is near. In the second place, it should not be forgotten that to bring about this very foolish sense of security with consequent relaxation of effort has been the ceaseless aim of cunning German propaganda from the outset and the same purpose is no doubt prominently in view at Berlin today. The new German "peace offer" is probably a part of it.

The Hun is shaken but not beaten and the end of the struggle no man can as yet foresee. This has been a war of surprises and unwelcome surprises may still be in store for us. The fact that the Allies are winning, that America has come to the rescue in time, that we are accomplishing greatly both at the front and at home, that our young men in khaki have given us cause for just pride, ought to have the opposite of the reported effect, ought to stimulate us and fire our hearts the more with the determination to do all we can to assist the government to continue the work so well begun, to push forward in a big way until the Huns are really smashed and the work made so complete that it will not have to be done over again within a few years. Every possible bond buyer should come forward and aid in achieving this great result while helping himself personally through an excellent investment, rock-ribbed in its safety.

MAY DANCE AGAIN.

British officers may once more "tip the light fantastic toe" in public places after more than three years of abstention from this social diversion. British officers have long lamented their hard luck in not being able to do what their American, French, Belgian and Italian comrades are permitted to do, and the coming of so many privileged American officers has increased their discontent. This more than anything else, it is stated, influenced the British authorities to rescind the order. The order was due to the complaints of commanding officers "that many officers under training were dancing all night with the result that they were not fit to put in a full day's drill and their training suffered." The conditions now are said to be different, whether because there are few Britishers still in need of training, or because the average officer in training now has better sense than to dance "all night," is not stated.

All soldiers need amusement in their hours of relaxation the better to enable them to support the grim business of war, and officers on leave are denied a very considerable part of their needed recreation if they can not take part in the chief diversion of the social life of our time. The long-denied British officer will now no doubt leave the civilian dancer far behind in the race for attractive partners.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger complains of "flagrant instances in which the restaurants have taken advantage of the food situation to reduce food portions and increase prices, with results chiefly profitable to themselves." The profiteers often remind us that the purely self-seeking hogs of this world are not all penned up in Germany.

Most of us are apt to think of crowded Manhattan Island's every inch as paved with stone, yet it boasted of 1,500 war gardens this season which produced vegetables worth $22,255. Thus does Hoover's magic wand cause even deserts of stone to blossom like the rose.

The American minister at Berne caused merriment by his too hasty assumption of the existence of a Swiss navy, but it is now perfectly correct to speak of Swiss [illegible], for these exist and are employed to notify airmen of their arrival at a neutral boundary.

The object of the Fourth Liberty Loan is nothing less than to safeguard the world, including the United States, by putting into a strait-jacket a robber and murderer empire that schemed to enslave all nations.

RALLY SERVICES AND PANTOMIME

Patriotism Was Key Note of Services Sunday at Rondout Presbyterian Church—Trustees to Purchase $2,000 Liberty Bonds.

Patriotism was the keynote at the services Sunday in the Rondout Presbyterian Church with Rally Day services in the Sunday School at noon and the presentation of "Mr. Liberty Bond," a pantomime, in the evening. At the Rally Day services it was announced that the trustees of the church had decided to purchase $2,000 worth of Liberty Bonds of the fourth denomination The Sunday school has purchased a $100 bond with the library fund, and will adopt a French war orphan.

An exceptionally fine program had been arranged for the Rally Day services. A new class of eight little girls graduated from the primary department, were welcomed into the main school that day.

F. R. Powley, the majority of whose class is now in the service of the country read the names on the new roll of honor that had been prepared by Treasurer Hugh McCullough. The school did have a roll of honor but instead of proving too large as expected it had proved too small, making it necessary to make this larger one.

An interesting Rally Day talk was given by H. E. Brown, and Miss Helen Webster sang, "Keep the Home Fires Burning," and Miss LosKamp also sang.

At night the pantomime, "Mr. Liberty Bond," as presented at the request of the government. Those taking part had been drilled by Mrs. I. W. Scott. The reader was Miss Dorothy Brown, while Mr. Liberty Bond was Tom Rowland, the English Tommies, John Connelly and Eric Brown; the English sister, Janet Brown; the English brother, Charles Ellis; the French girl, Kathleen Meeker; the French brother, Arthur Scott; the Belgium girl, Janet Phillips; the Belgium baby brother, Francis Phillips; the Spirit of the Allies, Ruth Scott; the Liberty Bonds, Ruth Shurter, Jennie Lucchese and Dorr Monroe.

The soldiers and stretcher bearers were Boy Scouts. The incidental music during the presentation was rendered by the choir and Miss LosKamp sang the French national anthem.

The pantomime illustrated the work accomplished for the Allies by those at home buying Liberty Bonds, and was in four scenes.

At the Rally Day exercises of the Sunday school the school decided to adopt a French war orphan, and the loose collection taken up at the evening service was placed in a fund to do so.

"LIBERTY SING" WAS A SUCCESS

Over one thousand people gathered on the spacious grounds of Pewiling Manor near Staatsburg on Saturday to take part in the first great "Liberty Sing" to be held in this vicinity.

The sloping lawn in front of the big Colonial house formed a natural amphitheater. At the bottom of the slope, with its back to the state road, a great sounding board had been erected. On the platform before it the celebrated Columbia phonograph orchestra was stationed and Conductor Albert N. Hoxie waved his baton to lead the singing.

Mr. Hoxie not only led the voices, he coaxed and wheedled and jollied the songs from the crowd. He made the ones in front sing alone, and then had the fringe of "stand-uppers" in the background try it by themselves. He had the crowd whistle the tune, and then hum it, and finally sing it from the song sheet which each one held in his hand.

They were a little slow at first in joining in, but when he brought all the children up to the front, lined them up facing the people, and one hundred childish voices sang "K-k-k-katie," it caught the crowd and there was no holding them back after that.

"Over There" from a thousand throats sounded from Staatsburg to Rhinebeck. "General Pershing will cross the Rhine" had no trouble in crossing the Hudson, and a passing steamer pricked up its ears—or rather its whistles at the sound.

Madam Francessa Paralia of the Chicago Opera Company, sang a solo from Madam Butterfly magnificently. She held the great audience spellbound.

General Aszapelian of the Russian army, an Armenian by birth, clad in full Russian uniform, was a picturesque figure and an interesting speaker.

A few drops of rain started to fall just at the close of the program, but it did not hinder a quite remarkable rendering of the "Star Spangled Banner." And when Madam Paralia's magnificent voice took the high note near the end and held it over all other voices, not a heart but thrilled with patriotism and love of the beautiful flag whose colors waved over the "Liberty Sing" and made it a patriotic success.

Most Primitive Still.

Probably the most primitive still in use is that used by the Chinese in the distillation of camphor, which is said, however, to be very effective. The leaves are placed in a wicker basket, which is fixed over an iron caldron containing water. On the top of the basket a basin of cold water is placed. The steam from the caldron passes through the leaves of the basket and carries over the camphor vapor, which is deposited in the form of camphor on the cool under surface of the basin.

Suits and Coats superior in every important detail

Buy Good Clothes —and Save Money!

¶ There's real economy in good clothes. They may cost a little bit more at first, but you'll find in the end that you have saved money—and helped the Government materially in its conservation of cloth.

¶ It is better to buy one good suit and wear it two or three seasons, than to buy two or three suits of inferior quality and have them shabby before the season is half over.

¶ We have GOOD Suits at $25 to $57
¶ We have GOOD Coats $19.50 to $99

MANY GRIP CASES.

Local Physicians Kept Busy—Dr. Gillett in Boston.

Kingston has a number of serious grip cases, and the local physicians are kept busy. Dr. J. R. Gillett was called for service in Boston last week to help the physicians there combat Spanish influenza, but is expected back this week. Another local physician was called for out of town, but owing to the grip situation in Kingston his services were more needed here and the call was cancelled.

Fire in Saugerties.

Saugerties, Oct. 7.—A freight house belonging to the Saugerties and New York Steamboat Company burned Sunday night. The fire was discovered at 11 o'clock and the alarm brought out Snyder Hose, Washington Hook and Ladder and Cornwell Hose companies, who were busy until 3 o'clock this morning with four streams of water before the fire was quenched. The building was filled with paper belonging to the Martin Cantine Company and was a total loss, nothing remaining of the building but the four walls. A high wind was blowing and made difficult work for the firemen. The steamer Ida was docked in front of the burning building but was removed from in front to a safe place. The steward furnished the tired firemen with coffee, etc. The amount of the loss was not ascertained.

New York's Systematic Growth.

A remarkable forecast of population of New York is brought to light in copies of the Scientific American for September 4, 1880. A statistician for the manual of the common council shows the population of the city to increase until 1905 would have made the population of New York 3,257,493, a figure almost in accord with the census of that time.

DEVIL TEMPTED ME SAID BROTHER ED

A Hearing in His Case Adourned to Friday—Austrian Did Not Register—Other Police Court Notes.

"The Devil tempted me, I guess," said "Brother Ed" Jansen of Gill street this morning in the police detention room where he was waiting to be arraigned in police court. Brother Ed was employed as fireman on the ferry Transport. The valuable bag containing $5,000 worth of jewelry and $500 in bills dropped from the car to the ferry floor near Brother Ed several weeks ago, was the property of B. J. Valdes of Cuba. Brother Ed picked up the case and cached the jewels in a quarry hole on the high road where it was later found by Jacob Steinhilber hunting through a pile of junk for a lost jack knife. This morning at the request of the police and with Brother Ed's consent, the hearing was adjourned to Friday.

Frank Lotsko, an Austrian, 38 years old, was picked up Sunday as a suspicious character at the Wilbur bridge by the guardsmen. This morning Judge Shufeldt remanded him to jail for three days so the exemption board could investigate. Frank had not registered for the draft.

William J. Parson was arrested Saturday by Officer Lawrence on a charge of driving past a trolley car on the wrong side. He gave cash bail for his appearance later.

Officers Snyder and Van Buren raided a crap game back of Gill's shed on the Strand Sunday afternoon. The two boys caught were notified to appear later in police court.

WAR WORK CARTOONS BY HARDENBERGH

Ralph Hardenbergh, formerly of Kingston, but for many years past with the Title Guarantee and Trust Company of New York, is the recipient of a certification of appreciation from the National War Savings Committee, signed by William Fellows Morgan, chairman of the Pioneer Division. The letter accompanying the certificate reads as follows:

"My dear Mr. Hardenbergh:

"It gives me great pleasure to forward the certificate of appreciation for the work you have done in behalf of Uncle Sam's Savings movement. Your splendid cartoons furnished the Pioneer Division have been of great service, not only to the War Savings movement in the Greater City, but to the various state and local organizations throughout the United States.

"Again thanking you in behalf of myself, Mr. W. Ward Smith, vice chairman of the Pioneer Division, and all the other members of our committee for the splendid co-operation you have given the savings movement, and hoping you will continue the good work."

Mr. Hardenbergh has made the cartoons that have been printed in the newspapers throughout the United States in aid of the war savings stamps, and The Freeman as well as the other local papers have published cartoons from the pen of Mr. Hardenbergh. Besides this work Mr. Hardenbergh has also submitted twelve designs for the Christmas cards to be issued by the government and has also made many cartoons used in the present Fourth Liberty Loan Drive.

The many friends of Mr. Hardenbergh in Kingston will be pleased to hear of the great distinction conferred on him by this government, and it is a source of pride to know that Mr. Hardenbergh still claims Kingston as his home, and delights in telling his friends about the good old home town.

"Bijah" on the Rialto.

Harry Smith, son of "Bijah" Smith recently entertained his father who was on a visit to New York. Harry took "Bije" all around, showing him the theatrical district, introducing his father to the noted ones in the theatrical world, and gave him a splendid time. Harry, for the past fifteen years has been connected with the Metropolitan Opera House in the capacity of assistant music librarian he having charge of all the music sung by the Grand Opera stars. Mr. Smith is well acquainted with Caruso and all the artists in the grand opera world, and has traveled throughout the United States with all the prominent ones. At present, prior to the opening of the grand opera house in the Metropolitan in November, Mr. Smith is at the Park Theatre in New York, where "Mignon," "Daughter of the Regiment," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Carmen," "Tales of Hoffmann," and other operas are being sung by exclusively American artists, including David Bispham, Maggie Teyte, Blanca Saroya, Riccardo Martin and other noted singers. There are twenty-two members of the Metropolitan orchestra now playing at the Park Theatre, and crowded houses greet every performance.

Beginning of "News."

Early newspapers modestly claimed that they published important happenings in all quarters of the earth, and to prove it printed on the first page of each issue a cross with letters N. E. S. and W. at its points, to indicate the four directions of the compass. A day came, however, when some busy editor, pressed for time, left out the diagram and printed the letters in a straight line on his outside page, N. E. W. S. The next step made them into the single word "news." A very considerable number of North Americans spend their days and nights seeking news and preparing it for a critical public. Almost one-half the newspapers of the world are published in the United States and Canada.—New York Evening World.

One Way of Escape.

"A woman marries a man who got up and gave her his seat in a street car." Then the only way for a man to escape is to poke his nose into his newspaper when he hears the rustle of a skirt near his car seat.

LIBERTY LOAN IN LOCAL FACTORIES

Great activity was shown last week by tht Industrial Liberty Loan Committees under the leadership of William Van Slyke, chairman, in securing subscriptins in the factories of Kingston for the Fourth Loan.

The large cigar factory of G. W. Van Slyke & Horton was visited by the combined teams, with Captain Everett Fowler as the speaker. After being ably presented by Chairman Van Slyke, Captain Fowler eloquently pleaded with the girls to subscribe to the bonds, depicting the struggle our boys are facing and urging all to stand back of the government. The employes greeted Captain Fowler with cheers and immediately signed up for the team solicitors and captains for $50 and $100 bonds.

Postmaster DeWitt's team then visited H. W. Palen's wood-working plant. Superintendent Granville Whitaker introduced the postmaster to the men and Mr. DeWitt launched into his usual attack of his Royal Nibs, the kaiser and his brood of autocrats, and brought down the house. The danger of over-confidence was pointed out and the speaker said "although we will have Turkey for Thanksgiving, yet we must show the world we are in this thing to finish it off wholly and completely, no half way measures, nor inconclusive peace." "Buy bonds until it hurts in order to put this loan over the top." The employes at Palen's responded with enthusiasm and subscribed for over $3,200 in a few minutes.

This team also visited the Manhattan Shirt Company, which had reported 94 per cent of employes had already subscribed for this issue of bonds. Mr. DeWitt congratulated the girls and the factory in this achievement and said he saw the finish of "his imperial and royal nibs" if all factories would do as well as this. All hands were much enthused and are ready for other sacrifices for Uncle Sam and his boys "over there."

The Columbia Shirt Company, Millen, Aikenhead & Co., Kingston Dress Manufacturing Company and Kingston Cooperage Company were all called upon by Mr. DeWitt and his co-workers and great success was attained. At each plant Postmaster DeWitt was the spokesman and emphatically paid his respects to the War Lords of Central Europe. His audiences were even more enthusiastic than the P. M., and replied concretely with subscriptions to the loan unhesitatingly.

Over $20,000 in subscriptions were obtained by Team No. 2 in these few factories. All told the entire committee is doing very successful work though handicapped by the absence of many employes owing to illness.

At a big meeting of all teams at the Mill street plant of the Herbert Brush Co., Leo Herbert presented Thomas J. Comerford of Team No. 1. Mr. Comerford very ably pleaded with the hundreds of auditors present and brought out great results. Over $18,000 was taken in bonds by these loyal workers, many of whom have bonds of all three preceding issues.

RED CROSS DRIVES WERE TOO SLOW

Apparently the people of Ulster county, especially the people of Kingston, have not taken to heart the seriousness and importance of the three Red Cross drives inaugurated last week. The linen articles called for in the linen shower for our boys and the hospitals, especially at the front, has not been fully understood. Soiled hands or face from garden work or housework or even from more dirty labor, makes us very impatient for towels, following the frequent bath. What then of the men who dirt encased beyond our utmost power to picture, who leaving the trenches are in need of such articles; or of those others, mud covered and wounded, who are taken to our hospitals, where the patient, the doctor, the nurse, all are in need of towels Think it over! With the land at home sick with influenza, surely no one should need to appeal for strong, useful handkerchiefs. And certainly there should be no need of begging for sheets, when we realize in smallest measure the hospital demands for such articles. Furthermore, who would not be glad to give a touch of home comfort to the hospital by donating table napkins, good strong ones, of course? Best of all, people are not asked to buy these articles to be given to the Red Cross, but are asked to give of the new or practically new supply in the house, thus making the gift doubly valuable. Because the Red Cross of Ulster county has not met its allotment along this line, the drive will be kept open this week, but the sooner it can be received and shipped, so much the better for those who need the articles and for our own credit. Send or take your linen to the Red Cross headquarters on Broadway.

Now as to the clothing for women and children in Belgium and northern France! Who of us would care today, with no comfortable fires in our homes, to have to be clothed in a dress made from a colored bed sheet or table cloth, or some similar garment? Already the vitality of these heroic women and children has been sadly sapped by all they have gone through and are today enduring, shall we have it on our conscience that those sufferers, these brave and cheerful sufferers lack warm clothing, especially as they do not ask for "up to date" garments but will be glad to make over whatever we can send that is good and warm and possible of renovating or remaking. All clothing for women and children, especially, and also for men of Belgium and northern France, should be sent or taken at once to the old Ulster and Delaware freight station on Cornell street, just a block in from Broadway.

Finally, are we hastening and working together as big a crop of fruit pits and nut shells as possible—not for a fad or a fancy—but to save lives? "The Huns are using with added fury even more deadly poison gasses than before. They can be met with safety if we provide enough of these pits and shells for the making of the needed carbon. Let's hurry them along!

Optimistic Thought.

A secret, if useful to mankind, should not be a secret.

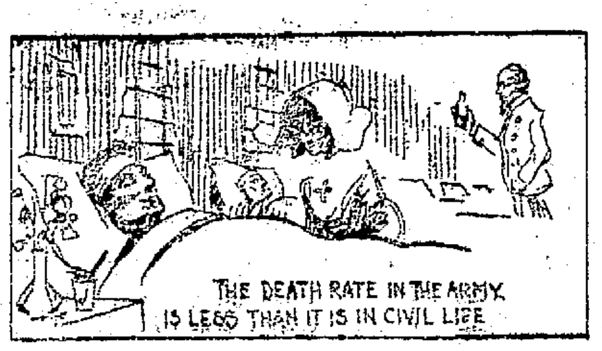
A NOTABLE FIRE.

Fifty-Two Years Ago Tomorrow Ulster County House Burned.

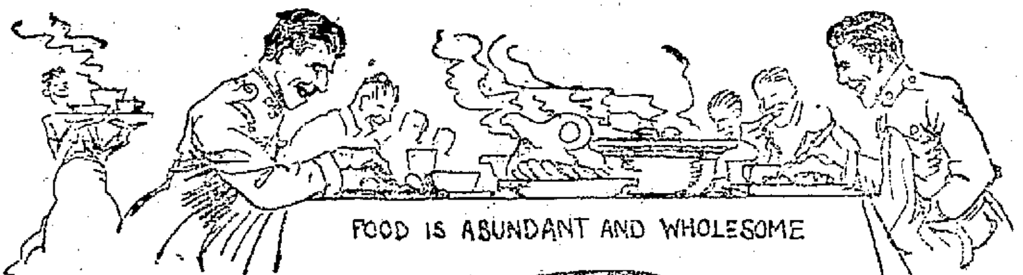
Fifty-two years ago tomorrow, October 8, 1866, the Ulster County House, was destroyed by fire. It was situated on Wall street, adjoining the court house on the south and was a long frame structure with a driveway running through near the center leading to large barns in the rear which were also burned down. The buildings covered the lots on which the former Kingston Argus building, the former Leader building and the Kingston Savings Bank building stands. The fire broke out at 9:15 p. m., according to the old duty book of Wiltwyck Hose Company and there had been the annual parade and inspection of the village fire department that day. The firemen worked 9½ hours at the fire. Wiltwyck Hose boys being on duty that length of time. Water to fight the flames with were pumped from fire cisterns by man power on the handles of hand engines.

"YOUR SONS SAFE IN ARMY CAMPS," IS MESSAGE TO AMERICAN MOTHERS

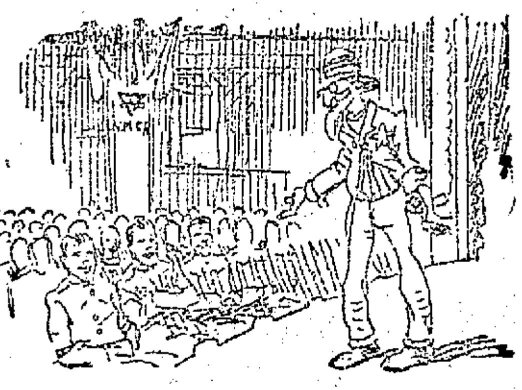
Their Training Makes Them Better All Round Men, Says Investigator Who Has Seen What is Being Done Both at Home and Abroad—Governmental and Other Agencies See That Their [illegible] and Morals are Guarded and That They [illegible] Profitably Entertained.



THE DEATH RATE IN THE ARMY IS LESS THAN IT IS IN CIVIL LIFE

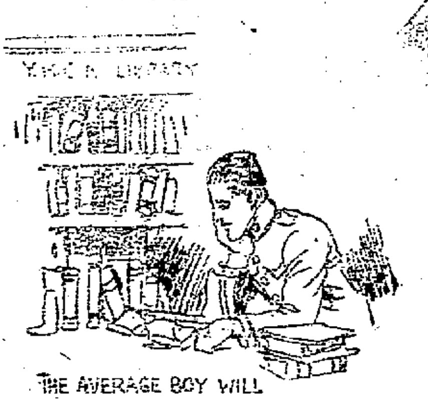


FOOD IS ABUNDANT AND WHOLESOME



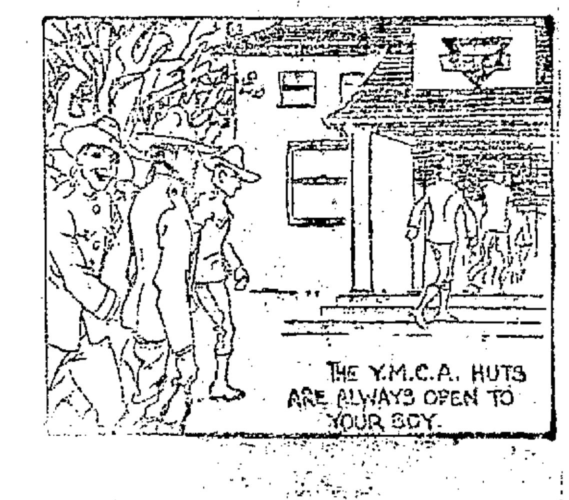
VAUDEVILLE, MOTION PICTURES, AND LECTURES ARE GIVEN FOR HIS ENTERTAINMENT.

EVERYTHING IS DONE TO BUILD UP PERFECT PHYSICAL MANHOOD



THE AVERAGE BOY WILL COME OUT OF THE ARMY BETTER MENTALLY THAN HE WAS BEFORE HE WENT IN.

Don't Worry! — HE IS ALL RIGHT!



THE Y.M.C.A. HUTS ARE ALWAYS OPEN TO YOUR BOY.

By William H. Crawford

FOR the Spartan mothers of America who have sent their sturdy sons to battle for America and Eternal Liberty, I have a message—the message they desire. It answers the questions that mothers would ask about their soldier sons, not concerning the perils of battle, but about the dangers of camp. A sense of duty impels them to say, "Go, my son," yet their mothers' hearts are anxious to know how their boys are being cared for—it will lighten their load to know that every provision compatible with the stern realities of war has been made for their comfort and protection.

What every mother wishes to know is, in a sentence: "Are my soldier son's mind, body and morals being cared for properly?"

Unhesitatingly, unqualifiedly, emphatically and from careful investigation, I reply: "Yes!"

His health is being safeguarded by medical and sanitation experts.

He is being well fed, at regular hours, on rations the equal of a general's.

His physical upbuilding is supervised by expert athletic directors.

His education is being broadened under guidance of notable educators.

The thought of you, his mother, is kept with him daily to steady his moral standards.

Clean entertainments and wholesome sociability, often in the company of prominent men and women, is developing him into a well balanced man.

How all this is being accomplished is told here.

I spent months with the boys "over there" and recently visited most of the camps along our Atlantic coast. I took this second trip for the especial purpose of getting accurate information of the present welfare of the boys to be delivered in a message to the mothers of America. I shall tell this story fully and truthfully.

HEALTH EXPERTS ON GUARD.

Bacilli, we know, are the greatest enemies of life, prime causes of sickness and death, contaminating our food and water. Proper sanitation will remove their menace, yet many families, many communities neglect that proper sanitation and pay the price in disease or death. In the army, the sanitary and health regulations are observed more closely than they are in the average family.

To each cantonment the medical department of the army has assigned a skilled sanitarian. His business is to keep the boys well rather than cure them after they are sick. With a staff of trained assistants he carefully considers every possible means of contamination of the water and food supply. He enforces [illegible], looks after the proper [illegible] for the camps and [illegible] the disposal of garbage. He has your boy's drinking water analyzed properly to insure purity.

Milk, frequently an active germ distributor, [illegible] the soldier in condensed form, [illegible] and canned under government supervision to insure purity.

Every cantonment is policed thoroughly, the drainage being as good or better than that of most cities, and [illegible] special [illegible] in that of the [illegible] [illegible] that removing [illegible] contagion. All burnable refuse is incinerated. No heaps which breed disease — carrying flies or mosquitoes are allowed to accumulate.

Food is abundant, wholesome, nutritious. Skilled dieticians determine the proper proportion of food essentials and have regulated menus to assure your son an evenly balanced diet. He does not get so much candy and pie as a self-indulgent appetite might desire, but plenty of wholesome body-building food, as good as his superior officers eat. At one camp I had the pleasure of dining with every rank in the service from major general to private, and I found the food equally well-cooked and wholesome. The general's meals were served more daintily, that's all.

PROTECTED IN WINTER.

Failure to clothe recruits properly was charged last winter. In the tremendous task of raising an army of more than a million men quickly, no doubt some did not receive overcoats immediately. These instances were few. The published charges were much exaggerated. The officers took care to see that the men who had not been clothed properly were protected otherwise from winter's rigors. Moreover, boys engaged in their strenuous work they did not need as heavy clothing as at home. What they wear is determined accurately according to health requirements.

"These things may be all right theoretically, but how does my boy look?" the mother anxiously inquires.

Truthfully, never in my life have I seen a more healthy, rugged bunch of youngsters than those congregated in cantonments along our Atlantic coast. The boys in France are equally robust. Boys who entered the service stoop-shouldered, sallow, dull-eyed, slouchy now are erect, ruddy-cheeked, alert young men.

In spite of all precautions, however, some men are bound to be ill among a million or more. Your boy may be one of those afflicted.

Large, thoroughly up-to-date hospitals are in each cantonment. They compare favorably with the hospitals in the large cities. The medical attention is immediate. Your son Tom is under the supervision of his regimental medical officer, and at the slightest sign of indisposition is transferred to the hospital. The medical or surgical care he receives there is the very best. [illegible]

[illegible] There was an increase in the per cent [illegible] from that of course. From September 5 to December 30 there were ninety-eight cases of pneumonia but, due to the modern, open-air treatment, there were only eight deaths, a much smaller percentage than would have died of this disease in a city of 40,000 to 50,000 population. There were two meningitis and one typhoid deaths.

There are fifty medical officers and eighty-five nurses in this camp's hospital, so you see Tom has a better chance to stay well in the army and to get well, if he is sick, than he would have at home.

HIS MORAL TRAINING.

Regardless of the opinion of doting mother, many boys grow up self-centered, lazy, bigoted, and without high moral standards.

Military discipline will correct these faults soon. Any boy will be less self-centered when he is only one of a whole regiment; less conceited when he learns that he must obey, and that his laziness will be cured quickly by the drill sergeant. In addition to this his moral standard will be strengthened by his sense of duty performed, by a feeling he is working for the public good, that he is offering his life for his country. He will see things from a better, nobler, higher point of view.

The halls of the Young Men's Christian Association centres are open for religious service every Sunday and on one evening each week. Where the Knights of Columbus have no building they use the Y. M. C. A. for Sunday morning mass, while on Friday evenings the Rabbis hold meetings for the Hebrew soldiers. The chaplains use the "Y" huts for their churches.

No religious denomination is given preference, but the religious workers have a common ground on which to meet. They all work for higher life and moral upbuilding. [illegible] welfare work among the boys.

FOR THE PHYSICAL MAN.

In order to make good and efficient soldiers it is necessary to have [illegible] These physical directors work in cooperation with the army athletic officer and the Fosdick commission. The soldiers are invited and encouraged to take part in all athletics. They are ex[illegible] and particular exercises su[illegible] to their individual needs are recommended. Sports at the camps include volley ball, basket ball, boxing, wrestling, relay races and above all, baseball. The "Y" man furnishes the sporting equipment free, referees boxing matches and umpires ball games.

KEPT PHYSICALLY FIT.

Keen competition encourages interest in athletics, with inter-company contests succeeded by inter-regimental matches. The games are played absolutely on the square and any player who is unsportsmanlike is disqualified. Everything is done to build up perfect physical manhood. The necessity for being physically fit restricts the manner of living of many men who are not controlled by religious influences.

Summer, with the clock put ahead an hour, means longer hours of daylight after military duties are done, and these are given to outdoor sports. Every available space is used for athletic field or playground. The boys crowd around the bulletin boards announcing the games and contests. Organized sports will not engage all the men, so mass games are also played, such as relay ball, tug-of-war, and other varieties suggested by that most popular person, the "Y" director. All the boys look up to him, want his approval and crave his advice. Tom's physical condition is being cared for properly. He will not go back to you a physical derelict as a result of having served his country.

Is he being given a chance to study?

Well, rather! In the largest university in the world, with purely elective courses. He can study or not, as he sees fit. The "Y" is at his service, with an educational director in each hut. Most of the boys want to learn French for use on the other side. It is necessary there. In Paris I saw an American soldier [illegible] trying to make a [illegible] man understand where he wanted to go.

Elementary English appeals to thousands of our foreign-born soldiers who came to America after passing school age and who have been so busy earning a living they have not learned our language. The majority are Italians and Poles, learning their A B C's with the aid of volunteer teachers, frequently men of affairs in civil life. Without any invidious comparison, I wish to mention one gentleman, and I trust he will pardon me for this personal reference. I use him only as a type and refer to Mr. Cochran, educational director at Camp Meade.

I found Mr. Cochrane busily engaged in teaching a class in French, with the eager young soldiers avidly absorbing every word. The hardest work the teacher had done before the war was the clipping of coupons. His home had a retinue of fifteen or twenty servants. Now he is shining his own shoes and serving others, and he told me that these days, spent in giving assistance to these boys who are ready to sacrifice their lives for America, are the happiest days of his life.

Every camp has a large library furnished by the America Library Association from which soldiers can borrow books. Boys fond of reading find this a great attraction. The boys throng the "Y" huts to hear the instructive lecturers, especially those who have been over there and can tell them exactly what to expect. The average boy will come out of the army better mentally than he was before he went in.

A SOCIAL LION IS HE.

He is becoming quite a social lion, is being splendidly entertained. Prominent women from nearby cities frequently go to the camps chaperoning parties of girls to entertain the soldiers and be entertained. Our soldier boy may invite his wife, mother or sweetheart to the camp and entertain her in the large reception halls of the Hostess House under proper chaperonage and under better conditions than if he took them to the main halls. The food is daintily served and is sold at remarkably reasonable prices.

The waitresses are volunteers from the cities, wives of statesmen, doctors, lawyers, etc., who don aprons to serve the soldiers. I had the honor to be served by a United States Senator's wife when I dined at one Hostess House. In this connection I desire to emphasize the breaking down of social castes as a result of this war's democratizing influence. I sat at the same table with a brigadier general, a corporal, a colonel, a high private and a Y. M. C. A. secretary.

Arrangements for your boy's entertainment are numerous. Vaudeville shows are given weekly in the huts and clean, light comedy in the Liberty Theatres. The houses usually are packed. Motion pictures are shown three nights a week, the newest films by the best producers.

Lecturers also are booked by the secretaries and at the conclusion of each talk, the boys crowd around him while he answers their volleys of questions. You may be sure your boy is not being slighted or mistreated because he has no shoulder bars.

AS A HERO IN FRANCE.

Your boy is working hard.

He is playing hard.

He is living out in the open. He is becoming more ruddy, more manly. His step is becoming quicker, surer. His habits are better. He is in more perfect condition physically and more fitted for his life work for having served in the National Army. He will fare equally well "over there." If his troop ship stops at England he will find a real home in Eagle Hut, the great "Y" centre in London, as well as in the homes and hearts of the English people.

When he reaches France, his reception will be a revelation. The French are demonstrative in openly expressing their admiration for the brave Americans who have crossed the sea to fight for them and liberty. They will show their gratitude freely.

Every American is a hero in France. Your boy will be a prince to the French. The military authorities have safeguarded his health, [illegible] the same care they used in the cantonments. He will be billeted in some French building, a chateau, a farm house, or, owing to crowded conditions, maybe a barn, but he will be hardened to accept anything.

His morals will not be contaminated in France.

M. Stephen Lauzanne, editor of Le Matin, and a member of the French Ministry, told me recently that he believed the morals of France, outside of Paris, were the best in the world. Your boy will not be permitted to go to Paris on his furlough, General Pershing having issued an order forbidding it. Tom will spend his furloughs in beautiful rural spots of France, at celebrated baths, safe and happy.

Should reactions from trench fighting or camp monotony goad our soldier boy to crave dissipation, the Y. M. C. A. workers are at his elbow to assist, to divert, amuse and instruct. The physical instructors are there to encourage participation in vigorous, happy games which shake out the blues, "chasser de cafard," as the French say. Home runs are being batted on shell-pitted fields and other American games are diverting the boys behind the lines. The Y. M. C. A. recently sent [illegible] worth of athletic equipment to the war zone.

WHEN HE RETURNS TO YOU

One serious thought with a word of comfort in closing:

You may read soon—probably before this is published, lists from the battle front of American boys killed or wounded. If the numbers seem great and cause anxious fear to clutch your heart, remember that we are dealing in vast figures. Compared with the number of men involved the casualties will show proportionately very small. The great majority of American boys who went over or are going over there will return to America, much healthier for having served abroad, more fitted to cope with the world, broadened, educated and better suited to do their life work.

Are the boys happy and contented? They are.

You may get some letters which may sound homesick, telling how much they miss Mother and how much they want to go home. [illegible] it is done largely as a compliment to you rather than an expression of discontent. What your boy really wishes to convey to you is, "Mother, I love you. I miss you." You misinterpret it as unhappiness. If you were to see him five minutes after having written this, probably you would find him engaged in a baseball game, shouting "You robber!" "Kill the umpire!" and other typical sentiments that any healthy, lusty American lad will utter under such circumstances.

The boys are too busy to be homesick, too much engrossed in work and play, too well fed to be hungry, too well cared for physically to be ill, and too well entertained to be dissatisfied. Your boy is happy and well, and, withal, has a higher objective in life. If he fails to write to you as often as you desire or if he writes homesick letters, DON'T WORRY—he is all right.

Physically, mentally and morally he is being made a better man, an honor to his country and to you.

Mother, your boy is all right.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 7.—The new peace step taken by the German government naturally caused acute interest in the Wall street district. It was not believed, however, that the action of the new German chancellor in itself has materially changed the situation except that it indicates the result of the continued Allied successes. Steel Common yielded ⅞ to 107½, a new low for this movement and other steel industrials, including Republic Iron & Steel, Baldwin and Crucible, dropped one point or more. Distillers also declined about one point. The oil stocks were again in demand, Texas Oil moving up 2½ points to 182½, and Mexican Petroleum advanced 2⅝ to 120⅝. Canadian Pacific advanced 2 points, crossing 171, and American Telephone gained 1½ to 105¾, the highest price reached in some time.

Forenoon trading consisted chiefly of a shifting of account from war issues to so-called peace stocks. The steel group was depressed by offerings for both long and short accounts. Steel Common yielded 1⅝ to 106¾, the lowest price touched by that stock in some time. Baldwin dropped over four points to 81⅜, and Bethlehem fell 2 points to 71½. Distillers was also weak, dropping 1¾ to 46¾, while Industrial Alcohol fell over 3 points to 102¼. The oil stocks were strong, Texas moving up 4 points to 184, while Mexican Petroleum rose 3⅜ to 122¼. There was a demand for the motor stocks. Railroad issues were up from 1 to 2½ points, Canadian Pacific showing a gain of 2½ to 171½. The marine and copper shares were fractionally higher.

The market closed heavy today; government bonds unchanged; railway and other bonds steady.

The KITCHEN CABINET

Talk happiness, the world is sad enough
Without your woes.
No path is wholly rough.
Look for places that are smooth and clear
And speak to these to rest the weary ear
Of earth, so hurt by one continuous strain
Of human discontent and grief and pain.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

Prunes that have been soaked over night, then simmered until tender, make a most appetizing dish. Remove the pits and fill with nicely seasoned cottage cheese. They may be served as a salad on lettuce with a mayonnaise dressing.

Spanish Sauce.—This sauce is good served with boiled tongue, sweetbreads or various meats. Put into a saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter, one of olive oil, a few dashes of salt, one onion, a clove of garlic, half a green pepper, chopped, and brown all together. When well-browned add a pint of tomatoes that have been strained. Season with paprika, salt, a few drops of tabasco and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Serve hot over the heated tongue.

Wartime Pastry.—Grease a pie tin well, then sprinkle thickly with cornmeal, dusting it well up to the sides. Then fill with any desired mixture pumpkin, custard lemon or cream filling; bake as usual. The pie will cut and serve as well as if the regular pastry had been used and it tastes good, too.

Cold boiled rice may be used in the same way in place of pastry or cornmeal, making a most appetizing pie.

Barley Sponge Cake.—Take one and a half cupfuls of barley flour, four eggs, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, one and a half cupfuls of corn sirup, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Separate the yolks and whites of the eggs, beating each well, stir in the sirup and flour sifted with the dry ingredients. Bake in a moderate oven.

Barley flour does not keep as well as wheat flour, so it should be bought in small quantities. Pastry is better used the same day, when prepared with barley flour. Less shortening is needed when using barley, otherwise it is used just as one does wheat flour.

Not a Rose Strewn Path.

Added to the trouble caused by lack of power in the early forenoon, eight members of the office force were confined to their homes by grip and the ninth grip victim left at 3:30 this afternoon, after a vain attempt to "work it off."

Love Apples.

Love apples is what tomatoes were called years ago when it was told that, if sweethearts would divide one and eat it together, no adverse fate could part them. There was real bravery in this simple act; for, in early days, tomatoes were thought to be rank poison.

Poser From Prison.

If men are the helpless creatures of their environment, how then do you account for the fact that in this prison there are three separate and distinct grades? Since the environment is precisely the same, how do you explain the segregation of the inmates into three wholly dissimilar classifications?—Leavenworth New Era.

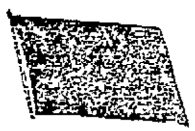
Belgian Flag Day.



New York, Sept. 28.—Today is Belgian Flag Day in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. Belgium adopted her national flag in 1831. The colors of this flag are black, yellow and red, and they are in three vertical bars, named in the order they occupy from the flagstaff to the flying tip. This flag today is a symbol of sacrifice and courage and commands the admiration of the world.

Belgium's colors are those of Brabant, a former Duchy, and Belgium's national motto is "Union Makes Strength." On August 2, 1914, the German armies invaded Belgium, thereby forcing her into war. Brussels was occupied by the enemy on August 20, 1914.

TIME TO DIG.

HE GOES OVER THE TOP FOR YOU—
FOURTH LIBERTY LOAN
NOW GO TO THE BOTTOM FOR HIM!

THE WAY THEY DO IN CAYUGA COUNTY

W. H. Depew, President of the Cayuga County Farm Bureau Association, has written to the Liberty Loan Committee as follows:

"With reference to the Fourth Liberty Loan I would say that the farmers of Cayuga County have responded admirably to every opportunity to loan to the Government and will gladly buy as many bonds as they possibly can without any exhortation whatsoever.

"We may have to GIVE our boys, but only LEND our money."

A PERMANENT PEACE.

The enemy hints and the enemy proposes peace according to his ideas, but we will never have a peace except a permanent peace; and the way to make a permanent peace come quickly and surely is by backing up the Fourth Liberty Loan and buying bonds!

GENERAL WEYGAND.

France is a land of supermen, whose names ring as easily and as pat on our tongues as do those of our own generals. Here is one not so well known—General Weygand. His smile augurs well for the future of the war, so far as France is concerned. Help him all you can. One way to do it is to buy Liberty Bonds. It helps you and it helps your country win the war. Buy till it hurts!

KEEPING A VIGILANT WATCH FOR THE ENEMY.

Here are United States soldiers in the front line trenches watching for the enemy. The high rubber boots of the enemy, splashed with mud to the hips, tell what a battlefield of this kind is like even in dry weather. Buying Liberty Bonds not only helps to keep the men warm and well fed, but—what is better—it tells them that everyone in the country is backing them.

SCHOOL WOMEN'S CLUB MET HERE

Undoubtedly the meeting of the Hudson Valley School Women's Club which was held in this city on Saturday, was the most successful of any of the meetings yet held. There was a well attended business session in the forenoon at the library followed by a thoroughly enjoyable luncheon at the Stuyvesant, for which covers were laid for sixty guests. At this meeting over forty new Kingston members of the club were enrolled, making more than fifty members in our own city, with the president of the club one of our ablest instructors at the high school, Miss Harriet C. Parker. The total membership of the club is some 200, representing schools from Yonkers to Catskill.

In the afternoon a large open meeting was held in the auditorium of the high school, the audience including many of our educational people, clergy, club members, ec. The speaker was Dr. Payson Smith, former commissioner of education of Maine and now active commissioner of education of Massachusetts. His subject was "Education in the Present Crisis," and a thoroughly timely and practical address it was, delivered by a man with actual experience to back his words. Dr. Smith called attention to the revelation made with the early examination of draftees when it was discovered that literally thousands of our young men could neither read letters written to them, nor write to those at home, because they did not know how to read or write. As the result of this disclosure a movement is now on foot toward a nationalized education for which there is such need.

A hearty exponent of vocational training, Dr Smith also strongly advocates the education of all classes, an education which shall mean as much to our foreign-born as to our native American citizen, in other words the Americanization of our foreign-born peoples through the medium of our schools.

Speaking of the agitation throughout the country against the teaching of German in our public schools, Dr. Smith was agreeable to the move in relation to our elementary schools, but firmly stood for the teaching of German in our higher schools and colleges that we may have a first hand knowledge o fall German prpaganda in future days.

Nor did the speaker offer any sympathy to school teachers, for he believed that every school child had the right to be taught by a well-trained teacher and such a teacher should command a minimum salary of not less than $1,000.

Dr Smith has during his educational work in the east, accomplished a vast deal along the lines of vocational training; higher compensation for teachers; the retirement funds; extension of libraries to rural communities; having everywhere the able co-operation of the women's clubs of the communities.

In additon to the address, which made a deep impression upon the thinking people of our community, the audience were privileged to listen to two delightful vocal solos sung in a thoroughly musicianly manner by Miss Helen Webster. The songs were "Dawn in the Desert," and "Freedom for All Forever."

The entire meeting was efficiently presided over by the new president, Miss Barker.

SOCIETY NOTES.

A very pleasant surprise was tendered Architect George E. Lowe Friday evening at the home of Dr. A. H. Mambert at 288 Broadway when about twenty of his friends appeared at his home while he was out on some business and upon his return he was completely taken by surprise when the lights of the living room were switched on and he found the room filled with his friends, who were there to extend their good wishes and say farewell to him before he leaves on Monday for the U. S. Navy Yard at New York city, where he has accepted a position. The evening was well spent, everybody on the alert and enjoying the several games put in motion by Miss Mauterstock. After the games refreshments were served and directly following Miss Ethel Mauterstock, who always wins the attention of her audience through the manner in which she presents her readings, gave several readings which were full of humor and kept every one full of laughter. Mr. Lowe ended the festivities of the evening with the rendering of two solos, "Compassion" and "God be With Our Boys Tonight." Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Kapewich, Mr. and Ralph Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L Schramme, Edison Marchant, Miss Ethel Mauterstock, Miss Georgiana Schick, Miss Caroline McCullough, Miss Kathryn Reardon and Mrs. George W Potter.

Decker, daughter of Daniel A Decker, of Kerhonkson, N. Y, was married to Horace P. Seifts, son of Frederick L Seifts of Poughkeepsie. Rev. George H Chesbro, pastor of the Hedding M E Church, officiated at the wedding. The bridesmaid was Miss Jennie Seifts, a sister of the groom and John J. Rehn acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Seifts left for Walden, N. Y., on the 4:13 train, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will be at home at 111 Main street after October 6.—Poughkeepsie Evening Star.

Compliment for Kathleen.

Kathleen told some stories to a little niece and nephew. At a family dinner party grandpa referred to these same nursery tales, but not following the exact lines, when Margaret piped up: "No, no, grandpa, that is not the way Kathleen tells the stories and Kathleen is a good knower."

Linked France and Scotland.

The small border, or treasure, which surrounds the arms of Scotland in the British coat of arms is the emblem of preservation or protection. A legend states that the border was given to Achaius, king of the Scots, by Charlemagne as a pledge that the French lilies should defend the Scottish lion. The significance of this lies in the design of the border, which is composed of fleur-de-lis.

Recent Letters From "Our Boys" in France.

Knights of Columbus

Camp Hancock, Augusta, Ga.
Sept. 8, 1918.

Dear Sir:

I wish you would put this in the paper:

Dear Friends: We have in this camp one of your boys and he is the only one that is from Kingston, and take it from me if they are all like him that town is some town, because he is liked by every one in this camp. Well Jack is a man that always likes to do his bit and likes to see others do their bit, too. Well Jack is going to do his bit now, he is going to go over, but they aren't sure of it yet; but the commander of the 21st Co., 6th B. M. Group No. 2, M. G. T., said to him that he did not like to send him over, but they asked for a good man and they picked him out, but did not know that it was to go over seas and was very sorry that they picked him. Well, we all like him in this company. He was only put in this week and we all knew him before because he was a M. G. instructor out on the parade grounds and he handled us all alike, but the other three, they were no good; they were trying to get Jack Burns's place, but I think they stand no chance because nearly all the officers that were working under him in the parade grounds liked him.

Well friends, I thought I would let you know that he was going over, because I thought that his friends would like to know about him. He was saying to his friends at the K. of C. that he would not let any one know about it. Well we are going to give him a big supper and have some of his friends from Augusta, Ga., with us, and he expects some of his friends from New York to see him before he goes.

I remain,

FIRST SERGT. JOHN MC'GRATH,
21th Co., 6th Bn., M. G. T.,

Augusta, Ga.

Dear Parents:

Just a few lines to let you know that I have arrived over seas safe. I had a most experiencing trip on my way over. I have seen big sharks and lots of fishing smacks. I hope you are not worrying about me and Tony. We are both coming back again. The Germans are getting a good beating now. The Americans are doing some great fighting over here. Wherever you look you can see American soldiers. This is certainly quite a place over here. We are in a resting camp here, somewhere in France. I have seen some awful nice sights here in Europe, something I will never forget the rest of my life. We got a hearty welcome here all right. We have seen girls doing men's work in all the towns that we have been in so far. The engines are awful small compared with the ones in the states. The people over here wear wooden shoes. It is comical to see the way that they dress.

I am beginning to talk French so when I come back I will be a Frenchman all right. We have good hopes now, the Germans are getting sick of war now. The German soldiers are all getting discouraged. They will get more discouraged when the Yankee boys get rightly started. I have seen some German prisoners over here, they all look happy and contented. French people use them awful good. We are getting used fine over here. The French people think there are no other people in the world like the Americans, they do all they can for an American soldier.

This is all at present, so I will close and hope these few lines will find you all in good health as it has left me. Love to you all. Your son,

JOSEPH SCHUPP.

Somewhere in France,
Aug. 31, 1918.

Dear Fred:

By the time this letter reaches you your vacation will be gone and as I imagine you will be back at K. H. S.

Oh! what pleasant memories come to me as I think of those happy days I spent inside the walls.

But even though one's senior year is supposed to be his happiest and when he leaves the seniors he leaves his friends, it was not so with me.

My greatest joy was the work of the Midgets and when I left it was the Midgets I was sorry to leave.

Of course it would never do for me to say "You are the only one I miss," for there was Captain "Bill" and "Skinny" and "Bus."

But somehow Fred, you have always come the nearest to showing visibly your friendship.

And my mother writes so many good things about you that I am very sure you and I will be friends after the war, which soon will be over I am very sure.

Today we did a good bit of fatigue work and took a bath; you see we just came back from the reserve line and so they are letting us do some much needed laundry work.

By the way Fred, it is almost a year since old Co. M left Kingston and now today we are doing our share in the great war.

Perhaps before next August we will return and if you are in the Colonial City we will enjoy a rather extended celebration.

I am different from some of the bunch for I like to think of home coming though it is a long way off.

There are two main things in the country, mud and fleas, and the man who can duel both is a marvel.

If I remember rightly your brother is in the Aviation Corps. If so perhaps I may see him for who did I meet the other day but Lieut. Cashin, the picture of health.

When you see any of the gang tell them I said hello! and wish them lots of luck. Tell Miss Cordes I am not dead and if I were there we'd have a "chic-a-chic-a-boom" for Kingston.

Be good enough Fred, to tell my mother you heard from me.

Your mother has my very best wishes and many thanks for those kind memories I hold of her hospitality.

And you Fred I need say only,

Your true friend,

AUBREY.

Paris, France, Sept. 10, 1918.

Dear Mr. DeWitt:

It has been some time since I have written you a few lines. I have the opportunity this afternoon. Well there is not very much new to write you only I have been transferred to another depot in Paris. I have a very fine place. I am in a very fine office and kept real busy. Been here since June 12.

I have been meeting some Kingston boys at the Y. M. C. A. Hotel about two weeks ago who were over the top, and they were glad to meet some one from their home town, and at the Y. M. C. A. is the place you meet the boys from all over.

I have been expecting Mr. Carey in to see me last week; somehow he did not show up. He was starting on his seven day leave and wanted to spend most of his time in Paris, and that's the place to spend it. All that you need is plenty of francs and you are all right. This sure is a very beautiful place around this time of the year, everything is in full bloom. Don't see any Catskill Mountains over here; very little hills over here.

We have one afternoon off a week and we make good use of same; going sightseeing, visiting a great many fine arts of interest, taxi ride is also a good way to see something, as Paris sure is a big city. I wish you could see the main headquarters building here, it is some fine place or palace, I visit same real often on official business for our officer. For a time we could hear the large cannons roar from the front lines, but the American boys got busy and stopped that, they are pushing them back daily, and which no doubt you read daily in the papers.

Well I must come to a close soon, as I expect my officer in very soon, and no doubt he will have plenty of work for me to do and which will keep me busy the rest of the afternoon and evening, which means no walking on the boulevard tonight. Give my best regards to all, also Mr. Fuller when you see him. I am

Yours truly,

P. S.—They have great plays here. One large American Opera opens this week—"Follies of 1918." Direct from New York city with 250 American girls which no doubt will be very good. I already have tickets in advance.

PATRIOTIC MEETING OF WAR WORKERS

At High School Building Tonight—Music, Pictures—Government Officials To Speak—To Discuss War Chest Plan—Public Invited.

The first patriotic meeting for war workers and especially for munition workers in the city will be held at the high school at 8 o'clock tonight. The meeting will be interesting to every-one and instructive and the public generally are invited. Captain J. J. Scannell and the Hon. L. S. Harris, who are connected with the Industrial Educational Section of the Ordnance Department of the Government, will be the speakers. Several motion picture reels which have been loaned by the government will be shown. Prof. Muller's orchestra of ten pieces will play. The whole program has been arranged so as to be as entertaining as instructive.

Captain J. J. Scannell is one of the best known recruiting officers in the United States. He has a record of enrolling through his own efforts in a short time 3,684 men, or a full regiment. In June he was ordered by the State War Department of New Jersey to bring the National Guard unit up to full war strength. The captain was not only successful in this but also in filling up the ranks of the heavy artillery. In all of the Liberty Loan and Red Cross campaigns, Captain Scannell has taken an active and effective part. He has also been identified as an active worker for the Soldier's Welfare and other patriotic organizations.

The Hon. L. S. Harris was made colonel by Governor Bradley of Kentucky and by the vote of the state legislature. He campaigned for and helped elect Bob Taylor of Tennessee. He was instrumental in building three railroads. He was secretary to Governor Proctor Knott and also while the latter was U. S. senator. He was a war correspondent in the Boer and Spanish wars. He has made many trips into Mexico where he met Villa and was instrumental in many cases in assisting the U. S. government.

With the speaking, music and pictures, all who fail to attend will miss an unusual opportunity. All munition workers and war workers are urged to attend. Mayor Canfield will preside at the meeting.

Before the beginning of the munition and war workers meeting at the high school tonight, the question of adopting the War Chest plan will be discussed. Many communities have adopted this plan. During the week of November 11 next, there will be a national drive to raise $170,000,000 for war welfare agencies. The agencies to be taken care of by this drive are the Y. M. C. A., K. of C., Y. W. C. A., Jewish Welfare Board, War Camp Community Service, American Library Association, and Salvation Army. In some communities the Red Cross will also be included and also local welfare and war agencies.

The proposition has been considered for some time by a committee as to whether Kingston and Ulster county should adopt the War Chest plan. It was finally decided to have a public meeting or to submit it to the people at a public meeting before taking final action. About a thousand printed letters have been sent out to captains and workers in past drives. All who are interested in the matter are invited to attend. After the proposition has been discussed and determined an interesting program for munition and war workers and others will be rendered, as set forth in a separate column. The meeting will start promptly at eight o'clock.
